Avarizza Canari Rose

Variedad

100% Canari

This red wine grape variety is believed to have originated in the Ariège as well as Haute-Garonne in the foothills of the Pyrenees. There are only a few scattered plantations of this red wine grape variety left in the world, mainly in Southern France, Northern Spain, Northern Italy, and Argentina. Canari is considered as a mid-late ripening variety and as very vigorous as well as high yielding.

The major viticulture hazard is its susceptibility to botrytis bunch rot. Resulting wines are full-bodied and are very rich in flavor and floral aromatics. Canari can be very spicy but are notable for their balance of acidity and sweetness. The elevated acidity makes them an appealing selection for the table.

Canari is also known for its attractive color, especially when made as a rose.

Tasting Notes

A rich cherry red color with bright ruby hues. On the nose there's a touch of candied strawberry, plum jam, and persistent notes of ripe cherries. On the palate this rose offers a great balance of sugars and acidity, unctuous body, and fresh fruit.
